

NOTABLE PRESIDENTS.

New York Sun.

Of the twenty-two incumbents of the Presidential office, Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln and Grant will live in the memory of men after the others have been forgotten.

Washington will be revered as the Commander in Chief of the army in the war that made us a Republic, and students of history will not overlook the incident that he presided in the Convention which framed the Federal Constitution. His fitting eulogy is enshrined in the memorable words of Henry Lee: "First in war, first in peace and first in the hearts of his countrymen." This expression in the resolution offered in the House on the death of Washington has often been attributed, though erroneously, to John Marshall. He presented the resolutions in the unexpected absence of Lee, but Light Horse Harry, the father of Gen. Robt. E. Lee, wrote them.

Jefferson was the apostle of Democracy and the founder of the Democratic party; and when all other distinctions fade away, he will be known as the author of the Declaration of Independence. He appreciated this truth when he directed that this crowning fact should be graven on the obelisk that marks his sepulchre near Monticello.

Lincoln's memory will be perpetuated by three events. As President he issued the Emancipation Proclamation, and was the chief of the Government during the war that resulted in the destruction of slavery and the preservation of the Union. To him more than to any other man the success of the war was due. He was assassinated for patriotic services in an emergency that will have no parallel while the Republic stands.

Grant's celebrity will mainly repose on his achievements as a soldier and a General in the field. While as a mere military chieftain he may be ranked with Marlborough, Frederick and Wellington. His fame will echo down the centuries as the leader of the armies that crushed an unequalled rebellion, preserved the integrity of the Republic, and liberated millions of bondsmen.

Four other occupants of the President's office will not be entirely lost to view for several generations, though they will have no such hold on immortality as the four above mentioned. They are Madison, Jackson, Garfield and Hayes.

The invaluable labors of Madison in the formation and adoption of the Constitution will long be recognized by the American people. Jackson will be remembered and admired as the reorganizer and renewer of the Democratic party, and as the champion of manhood against the organized power of money. It will not soon be forgotten that Garfield was assassinated without shadow of cause at the threshold of his official term. But the name of Hayes will survive longer than either of the other three, because he obtained the Presidency by fraud; and the survival will be the record of ever darkening shame and dishonor.

The recent shipment of several bars of bullion, worth upward of $5,000, from the deep workings of the Hale and Norcross on the Comstock, is a notable one. It constituted the first bullion shipment of the noble metals from the 3000 level of any mine in the United States or in the world. The ore material for these bars came from the cutting out of the chamber on the 3,000 level, at the surface or head of this winze, and what was extracted in sinking the winze itself in the ore body.—[Mining and Scientific Press.

A destructive cyclone passed over South Carolina last week. The damage done in the city of Charleston amounts to over $1,000,000.

Little Jackie Jones.

Old Mrs. Jones borrowed Mrs. Brown's receipt for making watermelon pickle the other day, and, being hard of hearing, as she couldn't see to read very well, she got her grandson to read it for her. Jackie took the paper, like a dutiful child, and, holding it upside down, commenced:

"Take a green watermelon—"

"Why, Jackie, ain't you mistaken? I thought the melon must be ripe."

"Oh, what's the matter wid yew! Gew ever see a watermelon that wusn't green?"

"Cut the watermelon into four halves—"

"But there ain't only two halves to anything. I don't believe you are reading that, Jackie."

"Well, I don't have to; anyhow that's what the recet says. Then soak it in a pint cup—"

"Oh, dear me! How in the world can you put a watermelon in a pint cup?"

"Well, I ain't here to tell the whereases and howfores. I'm just readin' the facts and you can put in the filosofee to suit your taste. After soakin' the melon put it in a skillet and fry it fur five days."

"I wonder if Mrs. Brown sent me such a recipe as that?" said the old lady; but Jackie kept on:

"Then put the watermelon in a quart bowl and pour over it a gallon of vinegar, taking care not to spill the vinegar—"

"I'd just like to know how you can pour a gallon into a quart bowl without spilling any of it;" but Jackie continued:

"Then sift a peck of red pepper through a milk strainer over the melon, and to one cup of butter and the white and yolks and shells of three eggs, and throw in the old hen that laid them, and four sticks of cinnamon drops, and two teaspoonfuls of quinine, and run it through a coffee-mill and let it stand till it ferments, and then put it in a tin can and tie the can to a dog's tail—this will stir it up to the right consistency—and then you can turn it off in crocks and have it ready for use. Serve it cold and spread it on mince pie, and it makes capital dessert;" and Jackie slid out of the door and left the old lady looking like a wrinkle on a monument.—[Detroit Free Press.
